At the request of his fellow soldiers, Jones showed his famous hell-buckled bett, labeled "Gott mit uns, studded with brass buttons, each button representing a German killed or captured. were absent from the airdrome on a bombing expedition over the British lines.

He did not wait long before the moon rose, and in the pale light he was able to make out the form of a large two-seater rapidly approaching. He waited until the German pilot throttled down his ergine to land, then dived out of the sky and trained his gun on his victim. In the darkness he could plainly watch the course of his hullets, and saw them strike about the engine of the landing airplane. Apparently his shots were not fatal, for the machine landed in safety. Again he drew off to await events.

In a few minutes lights began to appear about the newly landed two-seater, and the pilot was able to see, aided by the beams of the moon, that his shots had taken effect, for the pilot of the German machine limped away, supported by his fellows, while the observer was carried away on a stretcher. Thinking that he might as well make a complete job of his work, the pilot dropped a few hundred feet and fired steadily at the two-seater until at last the shots took effect, the petrol tank was pierced by a buillet and the whole machine became a mass of flames. While thus occupied, he notified the arrival of another of the raiders. As he was not in time to use his machine gun before the enemy landed, he satied low over the airdrome and dropped a bomb right in the path of the tarrying Hun. Though he missed the actual airplane, the high expicative tore a huge hole in the ground only a few yards in front of it, and before the pilot could change his direction he had run into the edge of the crater, crashing the airplane to pieces.

AR FIGHTERS

Individuality One of Big Assets Among Royal Air Force.

Initiative Must Be Depended On.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—An adjutant in the air service sent the following account of one night's work on the British front to the Daily Telegraph:

Individuality counts for more in the royal air force than in any other service. When an officer is told to go out at night and carry out an offer-sive patrol he is quite aware that detailed instructions can not be given him, and he must depend on his own initiative to obtain good results from his patrol. This particular pilot was told to proceed at night and carry out a patrol over one of the German airdromes. Thinking he might he able to "have a good time." he took a full load of bembs and as much ammunition as he could carry in his machine. Thus equipped, he set out to annoy the booke.

Just to liven things up and advise the foes of his presence, he dropped a wounded soldler had answered the same of those dear old ladies who evidently meant well, but the wounded soldler had answered the same who wounded soldler had answered the same who wounded soldler had answered the same who wounded soldler had anyevered the same who man any service and the pilot thought he had done enough for one night's work, so he disposed of his two remaining bombs the foes of his presence, he dropped a way into safety. Then he same and the pilots and machines were evenly manched each had a full had ful

Some PROOF.

She was one of those dear old ladies who evidently meant well, but the wounded soldier had answered the same questions so many times before, and he began to lose pationce.

French Civilians Unable to Stand 150-Mile Flight. Many Pitiable Spectacles in Evidence Among Travelers.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 5.—When the German retirement in Belgian Flanders began it was expected that 250,000 refugees would seek . 'etv in Hol-land. Up till Saturday n.r.' however, only a small fraction of this number had arrived. At that time about 7,000 had passed through the wire gates marking the Dutch-Belgian frontier. On Friday alone 4,996 arrived. All but 13 were French people from the dis-tricts of Valenciennes, Doual, Cambrai and Quesnoy.

There is no congestion, as in 1914, when the mass of refugees from Belgium threatened to overwhelm the hurriedly organized bands of willing help-

Pitiable Spectacle.

The spectacle of the weary, travelstained war victims trailing through the mud and rain was affecting, and the sufferings of the old and infirm men, women and children on the 150mile tramp were intense. Most of the French civilians had been on the road a month; others six weeks or two months. All the French spoke of the kindness of the Belgian people, who shared their food with them.

On the parsage the refugees slept at night on the bundles they carried.
The motley processions consisted of all classes, and a remarkable number of grandmothers of 80 or 90 braved the inclement weather in wheelbarrows pushed by the more able-bodied. The hundles of possessions carried by the refugees included birds in cages, chickens, habbits and odd kitchen utensils.

The fatigues of the journey were too much for some of the travelers. The weaker ones died on the way and a few others succumbed soon after reaching the hospitable soil of Holland. Many of the refugees are suffering from grippe and bronchial affections. The worst cases had been given immediate assistance at the nearest hospitals and convents, but the examining physicians say that the number of sick thus far has been lower than had been anticipated.

Many pathetic incidents occurred dur-ing the march. Among the refugees Doctors and nurses also were sent to the border and they are being assisted by the Sisters of Mercy from the convents in the southern provinces of Holiand. So far there have been two main streams, some 30 miles apart. One point of entry is where the Dutch provinces of Brabant and Limbourg meet and the other is across the Meuse river into Maastricht, the capital of Limbourg province. At these points the fugitives are registered by the military authorities and must undergo a physical examination. Pitiable Spectacle. The spectacle of the weary, travel-Adam Schaaf.
